The statute defines vehicles, as every kind of a conveyance except those de-signed to be propelled by hand, and expressly includes bicycles, tricycles, motor vehicles and motorcycles as well as all vehicles drawn by horses or other animals. Another difference in the law, is of course, that under the old provision vehicles not having springs or rubber tires, did not have to have lights, and thus a large class of vehicles escaped. Now all vehicles, whether with rubber tires and springs, or not, must carry lights. Public offi-cers are required by the provisions of the acts to report all violations of the
